Heart attack patients

Penn State Milton S. Hershey Medical Center researchers are studying if an experimental drug that reduces inflammation, when added to standard treatment, is both safe and beneficial in reducing future cardiovascular events (such as heart attacks and strokes) in patients who have had a heart attack.

Who may be eligible

• 18 years and older who have had a heart attack

What is required?

- Attend clinic visits every three months for up to six years
- Complete questionnaires at visits
- Follow instructions as provided

Compensation is provided.

For more information: Dena Jefferson, R.N., at 717-531-5967 or Todd Nicklas, R.N., at 717-531-5966

Study director:

Mark Kozak, M.D., Penn State Hershey Heart and Vascular Institute

Good People. Great Medicine.[™]
PennStateHershey.org

