Overview

This presentation is designed to bring information learned at national meetings back to the central Pennsylvania area for physicians to use in their daily clinical practices. The specific topics in this program have been chosen to cover as much of the 2013 ASCO® program as possible.

Audience

This program is designed to help specialists in hematology/ oncology, including physicians, physician assistants, pharmacists, nurse practitioners, and nurses, to increase their knowledge of the current research and treatment protocols in various cancers.

Overall Conference Objectives

Upon completion of the program, you should be able to:

- Discuss clinical and scientific data presented at ASCO® pertaining to thoracic, GI, and GU malignancies
- Evaluate new clinical and scientific information presented at ASCO® pertaining to breast cancer, sarcoma, and hematologic malignancies in your patients
- Describe new approaches to supportive care of your patients and cancer prevention as presented at ASCO®
- Identify new concepts in translational science as presented at ASCO®
- Determine how the information presented at ASCO® 2013 could change your clinical practice
